

Overview

With the arrival of foreign franchises, competition in the retail industry in the Netherlands has increased significantly in recent years. To gain a competitive edge, many parties are aiming to increase their market power in the distribution chain, achieve economies of scale and increase purchasing power through mergers, further concentration and cooperation.

The quest for economies of scale can also create a demand for larger outlets. Such spaces are scarcely available in inner cities or existing shopping centers, and the costs can be prohibitive when they are. In addition to the high rent, accessibility and stocking problems make things very difficult for retailers.

Our Retail industry group is made up of lawyers from various fields of law. Jointly, we provide legal assistance to a large part of the Dutch retail sector in negotiations and disputes. We are well known for our knowledge and skills and have experience of tackling virtually every challenge you might face. That means you get the benefit deep knowledge of your industry, that takes into account your current and future interests.
