

Overview

Corporations, trade associations and government bodies are increasingly confronted by regulators charged with the task of overseeing fair and honest competition at the national and European level. Competition authorities possess far-reaching powers which include the authority to impose fines and prohibit transactions. Competition law is also being invoked more and more often in private disputes between businesses.

Dentons Boekel has an experienced team of lawyers that focus in the core areas of competition work. Representing clients in all aspects of Dutch and European competition law, our team has gained a leading position in various sectors including financial services, retail and distribution, agriculture and food, healthcare, real estate and automotive.

Our Competition experts are well-known for their achievements on behalf of their clients in cartel investigations by the Netherlands Authority for Consumers and Markets and the European Commission and regularly represent clients in proceedings in both Dutch and European courts. They also advise on compliance, joint ventures and other forms of cooperation between corporations and assist in merger filings.

Clients benefit from our solid reputation in cartel damage claims and our extensive knowledge and experience in European law, including state aid and procurement law.

Areas of focus include:

- Competition and Antitrust Litigation
- Procurement law and government contracts
